Community Service Project Nets a Ton of Food for Pantry

Earning community service hours during Flex Block is a new initiative undertaken this year at Weare Middle School and Center Woods Upper Elementary School.

Developed by social studies teacher Holly Wilson, this new program allows teachers and staff to register projects they need help with and how many students will be needed to complete the task. Students then sign up for the projects they wish to be a part of and earn community service hours for their work.

The projects have ranged from decorating hallway bulletin boards to the most recent canned food drive with the Weare Food Pantry.

"The bulk of my curriculum focuses on civics, and I was excited to initiate a program where kids could participate in a civics-related activity such as community service," Wilson said in a school release.

A very dedicated group of students led the school food drive, which ran from Nov. 22 to Dec. 10. Prizes

New Police Hiring Brings Weare PD to Full Force

By Tom Clow

Christopher George was sworn in as the newest member of the Weare Police Department at a special meeting of the Board of Selectmen on Dec. 9. George comes to Weare as a certified officer, having served three years with the Manchester Police Department. Prior to that, he spent ten and a half years on active duty in the U.S. Army and currently still serves in the Army Reserves.

George's employment with the Weare PD was effective immediately with his swearing in. Being a certified officer, he will only require field training to familiarize him with the town and with department policies.

George said that he researched the town before applying for the position and liked the small-town, out-of-doors atmosphere. He added that everyone See POLICE, page 2 he has met has been super friendly.

According to Lieutenant Frank Hebert, with this hiring, the department has its full complement of full-time officers – a first in many years, he said.

Budget Presentations Continue

Presentations for the 2022 town budget continued at the board's regular meeting on Dec. 6. Finance Administrator Beth Rouse reviewed the budgets for the smaller departments, which refer primarily to departments and committees housed within the town office building, as well as budget lines related to government buildings, insurances, cemeteries, conservation and debt service, among others. Collectively, the proposed budgets of the smaller departments showed a difference of $5,637 over the 2022 default budget.

The Department of Public Works 2022 budget was scheduled to be presented to selectmen on Monday, Dec. 20. The town budget as a whole will be brought to the Finance Committee on Jan, 5, with presentations by all departments.

Town Clerk Maureen Billodeau has announced that the filing period for candidates for town offices opens on Jan. 19, 2022, and closes Jan. 28, at 5 p.m. Filings are at the Weare Town Clerk's Office, 15 Flanders Memorial Road. Open positions:

lighter than air flight by either balloons or airships. They had to find visual primary sources (mostly historical photos) and explain the images, cite their sources. "It was exciting to share with them how research skills are used in hands-on professions and that the skills they learn in school have many real-world applications," Crabtree said.

"Our students also presented to the class how hot air balloons work and made hot air balloons out of tissue paper," Sargent said. "It was a memorable day when students were able to launch their hot air balloons, using a propane-powered hot air launcher, outside on a beautiful fall day."

Other topics covered in E-3 will include creating websites, planning and building a model city, 3D printing, learning communications skills through formal presentation, and learning about a range of tools, from power saws to computers.

Students in the John Stark Regional High School "We the People: The Citizen & The Constitution" class participated in the district-wide We the People Competition on Dec. 10 in Concord. Students at the event "testified" in a simulated congressional hearing before a panel of judges comprising notable governmental and political leaders. Tidbits of Weare History

An occasional feature by the Weare Historical Society

This week by Tom Flaherty, director. Weare's 1826 "Grasshopper Year"

Due to severe drought, grasshoppers were seen in "flocks more than a mile long," darkening the skies. Swarms destroyed every living plant in sight, even eating the clothing worn by farmers, who would "scoop them up by the bushel and feed them to their hogs." It took a severe late-August storm to finally destroy them (as well as any remaining crops). This was the same storm that famously killed the Willey family in Crawford Notch. (Source: 1888 History of Weare, page 372).

Weare Resident in Civil War

Samuel Parson was mustered into Company H, Fifth Regiment in September 1863. He was captured during the worst day of fighting at Cold Harbor, VA, on June 3, 1864 and died as a prisoner of war in October 1864 at Andersonville Prison, GA. (grave #11,121) (Source: 1888) History of Weare, page 476).

Weare Divided?

Weare's original charter provided an option to divide the town into two or more towns or parishes. In 1773, an attempt to divide down the middle failed. Debate restarted in late 1785, failing again at town meeting. A petition to the state legislature followed, which was sent to committee and failed. In 1788, Sugar Hill residents tried again without success. Further attempts failed in 1803, 1805, 1814 and 1839. A final attempt in 1876 would have annexed the south-east corner of Weare to Goffstown. But Weare remains intact! (Source: 1888 History of Weare, page 512-513).

Favorite Gift

By Sue Canella – Weare Area Writers Guild

My Dad, Al Cannella, was a lifelong advocate for good books and good reading. When I was growing up, the oldest of nine children (though at the time we were seven), my dad read to us in the evenings. Of the many different stories he read, probably our overall favorites were the Joel Chandler Harris collection of stories of Uncle Remus, featuring the antics of Brer Rabbit, Brer

Fox, Brer Bear and all the other colorful characters the early African-American tradition of the South. But he did not just read the stories. He actually portrayed each of the characters' voices including the voice of Uncle Remus himself. In later years (after there were nine of us), he continued the tradition with grandchildren as well.

In 1980, "Papa Al" made a complete taped recording of all the tales and included the set of cassettes with a copy of the Walt Disney version of the book he had always read from for each of us for Christmas. It still remains one of our most treasured Christmas gifts. I think it was in 2010 that I took my set of cassettes to a good friend who used a little modern technological wizardry to digitally re-record the four cassettes onto three CD's and made copies for each of my siblings, so we can continue enjoying them and passing them on to new generations.

Anything homemade by my sons when they were little. -Debbie Farr

2,600 miles away, sunny Nevada, not a snowflake in sight, very homesick, a box of homemade gifts sent all the way from Connecticut for Christmas from my Mom, Dad, and grandparents. -Sharon Czarnecki

I was a little girl when I received the most amazing chalkboard for Christmas, one that my own teacher would have been proud to own. It was taller than me and wider than my scrawny, outstretched arms could reach. I played with it endlessly. I taught a variety of stuffed creatures, dolls, and my cat, Muffin, all the knowledge that I had and made up that which I did not. I was also excited to have received a shoebox full of all things classroom to go along with my glorious chalkboard, such as chalk, an eraser, Elmer's glue, scissors, a ruler, a hole punch, and tape...lots of tape, but the best supply that was in my treasured box was that of gold stars. Oh, how I loved that grand chalkboard and how smart it made me feel. You see...I was a teacher and teachers knew everything. -Karen Coulters

My favorite gift became obsolete a long time ago! I had asked for a hair dryer but wasn't sure I'd be fortunate enough to get one. I was thrilled on Christmas Day to open my very own portable hair dryer. It had a tube that attached the motor to the large plastic cap, which fit over my painful brush rollers. (How I envied girls with natural curly hair!) A side benefit was the noise it made-- a good excuse to drown out my brother's taunts. -Connie Evans

I was home in time for Christmas 2020, that I would celebrate alone, following surgery for a broken right femur. My son, Lloyd, brought my gifts with him the day he drove me home from the hospital. Faced with months of isolation and home physical therapy to heal, I was hoping for meaningful activities that would provide enjoyment and keep me away from the TV. Lloyd and Jan's gift did just that: an aero garden. All I had to do was put water in the container, add fertilizer, put the pre-seeded lettuce cones in the slot, plug it in, then watch and wait. Soon, little green shoots began to appear, then lettuce leaves that were ready to pick by late February. I had fresh salad to eat for several months to come. - Marge Burke

Getting together with family. -Michael Collins

Wings

By Michael Collins

Books are a hobby and a recreation. I enjoy reading. I generally read a book and then send it to the thrift store on my next visit. But really, I have an extensive collection of books that I cannot seem to remove from my bookcases to give away. One of these is Robert Fulghum's book titled, "It Was on Fire when I Lay Down on It." It is a fascinating read with short stories from various periods of his life. He was a Unitarian minister and some of the stories are about the couples he joined in marriage. It is an uplifting book, and I read through it from time to time. One story struck me this time more than the other times I have read it.

The story is about Hans Ludwig Babblinger from the cathedral city of Ulm, Germany. To the south of the city are the foothills of the Bavarian Alps; to the east lie cliffs overlooking the Danube River. Hans was a craftsman of artificial limbs and had a brisk business due to the period in which he lived. Many people lost an arm or leg by amputation to stop gangrene. The time was the late 1500's: 1580 to 1595. As Hans worked in his shop on limbs, his mind wandered and he wondered if he could fly. He built wings and in 1593 or 1594 he took his invention to the foothills to the south where there was a steady updraft of wind. Many spectators watched as he leaped from the edge of a steep hill. Hans soared in the air - the first hang glider (or at least the first known successful hang glider). He landed safely. The King wanted a demonstration, but was pressed for time (Kings are very busy). Hans took his wings to the nearby cliffs overlooking the Danube River. Unfortunately for Hans, the wind was in a constant downdraft from the cliffs to the river below. Hans survived the fall but he had failed to soar. The King was not impressed, and the local bishop was embarrassed. The following Sunday, the bishop condemned Hans and stated that "man was not meant to fly". Hans retreated home a broken man and soon died.

"Man was not meant to fly" stuck in my mind as I thought about the Wright brothers, who built and flew the first motor driven airplane into a steady breeze coming in from the ocean at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina in 1903. What is significant is what they did prior to that day, December 17, 1903, to have a successful flight. The brothers built many models before finding a design that worked. Their claim to fame in my mind is that they built the first wind tunnel to test the designs. This lead to the theories of wing lift and other breakthroughs that led to building bigger, heavier, and more stable airplanes. Without the development of the wind tunnel, flight would not have happened in 1903. It is amazing how quickly the world went from no airplanes to airliners carrying 300 passengers. And these planes are flying at 30,000 to 35,000 feet above sea level (generally 5 to 7 miles up). And did I mention that on any given weekend, men and women are launching off cliffs and hang gliding into the updrafts?

Hope for the Morn

The night is dark,
the sky is deep,
the air is crisp,
the crescent moon
shows its presence,
the stars twinkle
on this glorious night, sending hope for the dawn of the new day.
